MINUTES OF THE MEETING OF THE ASTRONOMICAL SOCIETY OF THE PACIFIC, HELD AT CHABOT OBSERVATORY, OAKLAND,
ON SATURDAY, MARCH 27, 1915, AT 8:00 P. M.

The cosy little Assembly Hall of the Chabot Observatory was placed at the disposition of the Society for this meeting, through the courtesy of the Oakland School Department, and a small but very attentive audience gathered to hear Dr. R. G. AITKEN's lecture on "Star Clusters." The subject was beautifully illustrated and deftly handled by the speaker, than whom it were hard to find a scientist who can get closer to the minds and sympathies of a layman's audience.

Mr. CHARLES BURCKHALTER prefaced the lecture of the evening by a report on the progress of his new observatory and twenty-inch glass, and all friends of the science will be glad to know that the School Department of the city of Oakland will have a fully equipped astronomical department in full working order within the coming year.

D. S. RICHARDSON,
Secretary.
